Fourth meeting

'Art as a Portal to New Ways of Living'

Monday, 15 June, 4 p.m.

Maristella Svampa, Teresa Riccardi, Fabiola Heredia and Nicolás Testoni in conversation
Moderated by Victoria Noorthoorn, Director of the Museo de Arte Moderno de Buenos Aires

Participating in this fourth meeting, moderated by Victoria Noorthoorn, Director of the Museo de Arte Moderno de Buenos Aires, were Maristella Svampa, a CONICET Senior Researcher and lecturer; Fabiola Heredia, Director of the Museo de Antropología, Universidad Nacional de Córdoba; Teresa Riccardi, Director of the Museo de Artes Plásticas Eduardo Sívori, Buenos Aires; and Nicolás Testoni, Director of the Museo-Taller Ferrowhite in Bahía Blanca.

This panel draws its inspiration from the cause of Maristella Svampa, who defines herself as an amphibious intellectual and an inveterate Patagonian who thinks in a Latin American key. Through an analysis of the socio-ecological crisis, social movements and collective action, the renowned Argentinian sociologist and activist reaffirms humankind's great opportunity in quarantine to rethink and enable sustainable, equitable coexistence. In her view, art has had a utopian dimension, since time immemorial; the best artists have always been ahead of their time and have rehearsed and designed other ways of being in the world, removed from the prevailing paradigms of the day. Persuaded of the need to think of the museum and art as portals to a new world that is fairer, more democratic, greener and more feminist, the directors of Argentinian museums invited onto this panel share their own outlooks and utopias, and those of the artists and intellectuals whose careers they follow closely, and the actions they promote to make these utopias a reality.

ILLUMINATING MUSEUMS

Friday, 23 October, 8 p.m.

Organised by the Red Argentina de Museos y Espacios de Arte (RAME), museums across Argentina lit up their façades to highlight the essential and fundamental contribution of art for the expansion of public space in rebuilding social bonds in our communities.

Since the emergence of the pandemic, this new network has devoted itself to carrying out joint work developing protocols for the sector and organising different public lectures, with the aim of sharing experiences of re-opening museums in Argentina and around the world.

The various different cases have shown that museums are safe spaces easily adaptable to new habits and help to spread the prevention measures to be adopted by all citizens, while seeking to enable visitors' personal and affective encounters with works of art.

This symbolic initiative of lighting up museums' façades set out to make visible their essential value as cultural institutions and producers of knowledge and a sense of belonging, while representing a space of relaxation and recreation for citizens.

In parallel with this action, the four founding museums of RAME organized the #LosMuseosIluminan Festival with a common agenda of activities, taking place on Saturday 24 and Sunday 25 to invite visitors to participate in a variety of meetings, visits and actions across the different museums.

With this in mind, the Moderno prepared to re-open its book and coffee shop at 350 Avenida San Juan and to stage a three-day programme, including both on-site and virtual activities:

Friday, 23 October, 8 p.m.: illuminating Museums

Organised by RAME (Red Argentina de Museos y Espacios de Arte), the Museo Moderno illuminated the facade of its premises at 350 Avenida San Juan, along with museums the length and breadth of Argentina. The gesture was intended to convey the essential and unequalled contribution of art in the expansion of the public space and the rebuilding of social bonds in our communities.

Saturday, 24 October, 3 to 6 p.m.: Opening of Mi vereda [My Pavement] - Museo Moderno Special Edition

The Museo Moderno presents the project Mi vereda [My Pavement], devised and coordinated by Valeria Vilar with Zoe Di Rienzo as guest curator. Mi vereda is an exhibition project on the public roadway, displaying the production of local artists during the pandemic. It sets out to collectively display works carried out during lockdown to produce a meeting, a communion between the artists and their subjectivities; every other Sunday around different local neighborhoods. Mi vereda is also replicated through other Argentinian artists residing abroad.

The action took place on the pavement outside the Museo Moderno and was open to residents from the local neighbourhood of San Telmo, who could visit in person, as well as visitors from the rest of Argentina, who could follow the project on the Moderno's social networks.

Guest Artists: Juan José Cambre, Aili Chen, Guillermo Iuso, Nuna Mangiante, Ani Markman.

Saturday 24, 6 p.m.: Virtual opening of the exhibition Nicanor Aróz: Sueño sólido [Nicanor Aróz: Solid Sleep].

Virtual guided tour with the participation of the artist and curator of the exhibition, Lucrecia Palacios.

Sunday 25, 6 p.m.: Live broadcast from Mi Vereda [My Pavement].
Programme curated by Zoe Di Rienzo.

Showing of the documentary Sergio De Loof: Never Heard Of Me?
