CİMAM, International Committee for Museums and Collections of Modern Art, is an international forum of professional character for the discussion of theoretical, ethical and practical issues concerning the collection and exhibition of modern and contemporary art.

CİMAM Members are museum professionals, they include the directors and curators of museums or institutions qualifying as Museums as well as training and research institutions which are beneficial for the advancement of the modern and contemporary art museum community abiding by the İCOM Code of Ethics for Museums and CİMAM’s Principles of Deaccession.

In 2013 CİMAM reached 575 voting members from 78 different countries.

The Committee’s major objective is to develop cooperation and knowledge by identifying and responding to the needs and issues faced by modern and contemporary art institutions and professionals. CİMAM has generated reference codes such as the General Principles on Conditions of Deaccession from Modern and Contemporary Museum Collections, adopted in November 2009, and has promoted the Contemporary Art Museum Watch advocacy program concentrating on the different critical situations of contemporary art museums and collections in regions affected by world economical and political crises.

The first CÎMAM Annual Conference took place on July 5th 1962 in The Hague. Since then the Committee has celebrated 46 conferences that have been held in over 30 different cities around the globe. CÎMAM’s Annual Conference has become an important meeting point for contemporary art professionals and an essential resource for the collaboration between museums, visual art professionals, artists and other institutions concerned with modern and contemporary art.
CİMAM Board Members
2014–2016

In 2013 CİMAM Members elected 15 board members to represent them throughout the 2014–2016 triennial. The election process opened online on 17 June and ended on 12 August 2013. For the first time CİMAM Members were invited to vote online through a secure form available at cimam.org. The result of the elections was announced to the Members during the General Assembly held at MAM Rio, Museu de Arte Moderna do Rio de Janeiro, on 14 August 2013.

The outgoing board members and the elected board members present at the 2013 Annual Conference in Rio de Janeiro elected Bartomeu Marí, Director of MACBA, Barcelona, Spain, to be the new President of CİMAM. Patricia Sloane, Associate Curator, MUAC/UNAM, Mexico D.F., Mexico, was appointed Secretary–Treasurer of the organization.
The outgoing President for the period of 2011–2013, Zdenka Badovinac, Director, Moderna galerija, Ljubljana, Slovenia, was named Honorary Member of CÎMAM in gratitude for her intense dedication and important contribution to CÎMAM.

Bartomeu Marí declared: "In a world of constant and now profound changes, CÎMAM should serve as a frame of reference for the analysis and qualification of new forms of institutional practice. The establishment of Principles of Deaccession, or the Contemporary Art Museum Watch program are good examples of this role. CÎMAM should be able to act as an arbiter within a greater and more dynamic museum world."

The petition was signed by over 2,000 professionals and addressed to Aurélie Filippetti, French Minister of Culture and Communication.

CİMAM 2013 ANNUAL CONFERENCE

12 – 14 AUGUST

MAM RİO

RİO DE JANEİRO
New Dynamics in Museums: Curator, Artwork, Public, Governance

Rather than on the question of what museums represent, the focus of this year’s conference New Dynamics in Museums: Curator, Artwork, Public, Governance will be on who the agents of representation are. Having become too extensive to be represented in the museum context in its entirety, the world is now only presentable through the forces that shape it. And the same goes for the art world, which can be less grasped encyclopedically than ever before. Art was the first to express a critical attitude to the dominant forces shaping reality, most directly with institutional critique. After being dealt with by art, museum work embraced self-reflection. The museum seems to represent the world most accurately by reflecting the dynamics of its own work, which in turn reflects the dynamics of our socioeconomic reality in general.
One of the key issues addressed by this year’s CÎMAM conference will be the new dynamics between the principal museum agents: curators, artworks, the public, and governance. The discussion proposition is that the new socioeconomic circumstances dictated by the global neoliberal capitalism have altered the curator–artwork–the public relation and stepped up the pressure in terms of museum governance. The new dynamic in these relations means, first of all, changed and less strictly defined roles of the individual agents. The new conditions produce new models of curatorial work altering the nature of art and the status of the public. Just as the political and economic world presents itself as progressively more democratic though in reality it is not, so does the museum. Some museums understand democracy as similar to a supermarket, offering its visitors the greatest possible variety of contents; others strive to adopt an attitude of awareness of the reality surrounding them. Such attitudes are based also on the reevaluation of the idea of the democratization of the museum, which in the context of the philosophy of the Enlightenment meant, above all, public access to the collections, but has now shifted in the direction of greater participation of the public sphere. Thus the democratic museum today should not only represent the world but also be open to its influences. By analogy, museums should not only include and accumulate art of various marginal groups and spaces, but enable them to participate and give them the right to self-interpretation.
More than ever before, the museum needs self-reflection. How does a museum work, on whose behalf does it interpret contents, whom does it address? How much professional autonomy does it preserve in this?

In the globalized world, curators work in infrastructures of vastly varying stages of development and corresponding models of institutions. Museums are no longer the only institutions involved in working with cultural heritage and the way it relates to social and political circumstances; more and more local art centers that are not museums and international institutions such as biennials or art fairs are focusing on research programs. Alongside the new models of institutions new models of curatorial practices are evolving. No longer merely stewards of collections or organizers of exhibitions, curators are now also producers of the context and infrastructure, especially in the spaces without a developed institutional system.

Another thing impacting curatorial work today is the increasing governance of different museum boards, composed of people from the world of capital and politics. With the dwindling public funding private interests are gaining ground, and museums are now expected to please and draw the greatest numbers of visitors possible as well as forced to follow marketing demands. Due to the economic and political crisis even main national museums are closing in some parts of the world, their directors are being dismissed, and there is censorship.

A new dynamic between curator and artwork

Curators are now faced with a series of new and specific contexts in which they require the collaboration of diverse people in order to work out the meaning of a work, ensure a suitable presentation, and deal with complex copyright issues. Artists are no longer self-sufficient either; their role often overlaps with that of curator, scientist, and social agent. Artworks are not merely subjects of professional analysis but also play a performative role in the museum, i.e., they impact the way a museum works. Moreover, curators increasingly work with art from diverse geographical and sociopolitical contexts. Many works only come alive in interaction with the public. All of this generates new forms of curating, increasingly interdisciplinary and team-oriented. The discrepancy between all these heterogeneous aspects on the one hand and the global communications and networking technologies on the other makes all the more obvious the need for better coordinated professional methodology and translation tools.

A new dynamic between curator and public

Curators no longer see themselves only in the role of experts imparting knowledge but as agents opening up the museum to various external groups to co-shape it. Today, a museum must draw up programs that provide a framework for knowledge from below. Among the most burning questions today are: how should the museum act in the increasingly dynamic horizontal forms of knowledge production and how can it regain its vertical dignity?
A new dynamic between curator and museum governance

Professional curatorial work is under increasing pressure and must often give in to marketing demands or ideological control. To what extent does this endanger professional work and what are the ways and means of resisting dictates of this type? How to protect professional work and how to articulate scientific criteria that rule the activities of curators with the needs emanating from educational, marketing or economical demands?

The attendance this year was lower than previous CÎMAM editions, perhaps due to the unusual Summer scheduling, which was adjusted to coincide with the ÍCOM General Conference.

Evaluation survey

We are always interested in hearing from CIMAM’s conference delegates; it helps us identify our strengths and weaknesses and to react accordingly. As every year, CIMAM sent an online evaluation survey to all the conference delegates. This feedback is essential to us.

The overall summary of the evaluation survey shows a general satisfaction with the Conference program with several suggestions to better the organization and implementation of the workshop sessions.

We much appreciate the positive feedback on the 2013 conference organization and will work hard to improve the forthcoming CIMAM conferences.

Below is a short overview of the evaluation survey. We can send you a copy of the complete evaluation report upon request.

The present accountancy is pending certification with the official accountability that will be available by March 2014. CÎMAM’s accounts are certified by an expert lawyer. The accountability complies with the standards set by the Plan General de Contabilidad (PGC), Spain, and the International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS).

CÎMAM keeps a file of all expenses, including receipts and invoices, which documents how the funds have been spent. CÎMAM also keeps track of all income and cash flow in order to document the provenance of all funds. This information will be kept for a minimum of four years. We hereby certify that the above and attached statements are true and accurate.

Monday 20 January 2014

Bartomeu Marí
President of CÎMAM

Patricia Sloane
Secretary-Treasurer of CÎMAM
